Blandfield.
We had an opportunity this week of visiting for the first time Blandfield, the family residence of the Beverlys since colonial days, and at this time the property of Col. Robert Beverley, of Fauquier county, Va., who came in possession of it at the death of his uncle, the late Col. Wm. Beverley, of this county. The house is built of English brick and dates back, we believe, to the year 1716, at which time Wm. Beverley, an ancestor of the present proprietor, was appointed clerk of what was then called Rappahannock county, out of a part of which this county was subsequently formed. The main building, which is in a good state of preservation, is square, two stories high, with four rooms on a floor, opening on a large hall, or rather two halls, as they are separated by a partition in which there is a large folding door, the chimneys of which, there are four, are inside ones, and these halls have fire places for heating them when necessary; the roof is quadrangular, and we suppose would be called square; about fifty feet on each side, and to the front of the main building are two smaller buildings of the same material and of similar construction to the main building and connected with it by covered passage ways, which are still in need of repair. It is situated on an eminence overlooking the Rappahannock, and from it the owner could obtain a fine view of his broad acres lying along that majestic stream. The place derives its name from the Bland's, a family with which the Beverlys intermarried very soon after their settlement in this country. The estate has been much improved since it came into the hands of the present proprietor, but the old house, which has undergone no change or alteration, except those that have been occasioned by the lapse of time, presents now the same general aspect as it did when the Beverlys of his Majesty's colony obtained with almost royal magnificence the Virginia gentry of golden time, the Bland's, the Carters, the Lightfoots, the Lees, and others of the Virginia gentry.

The most notable among the improvements is a large barn, 76x51 feet, with 36 feet pitch, which has been recently built, and of a style most unusual in this section; the basement, which is of brick, furnishes ample stable room for the teams employed in the cultivation of the estate; on the first floor is a large open room which may be used for protecting machinery or storing grain as occasion may require; on one side are compartments for housing small grain, on the other open cribs for housing corn for the use of the place. The upper floor is used for storing hay and long forage. The area under cultivation the present year is less than five hundred acres, and is divided as follows: 250 acres in wheat, 50 in oats, 150 in corn and about 20 in tobacco. The wheat crop, which is a fine one, was being harvested when we were there, and presented a most promising appearance. We saw in operation a reaper of different patent from any heretofore used here, doing the work of about ten cradlers with the greatest ease and precision, and we were informed by the manager that it was the best he had ever used. The crops of corn and oats were remarkably promising; the tobacco not so good, owing to the difficulty in getting a stand and the ravages of the worm which had just attacked it.

We were shown by the polite and efficient manager, Mr. F. M. Hutchinson, six-bunches of Pennsylvania red wheat, the product of six grains of wheat, which ranged from seventy-five to one hundred and forty heads to the bunch, which we venture to say is as large a number of heads as has ever been known to be produced from a single grain. The farm has been heavily limed and evidences of its improvement can easily be seen in the appearance of the growing crops.

The present owner has turned his attention to stock raising, and sells yearly a large number of cattle in the Northern markets. Our attention was particularly directed to some beautiful specimens of the Durham and Devon breeds that it was the best he had ever used. The crops of corn and oats were remarkably promising; the tobacco not so good, owing to the difficulty in getting a stand and the ravages of the worm which had just attacked it.

Bonds Stolen.—A dispatch from St. Paul, Minnesota, to the Chicago Times, says: "Major Brecken, chief of the Detective Bureau in this city, acting on information received from Fort Garry, Manitoba, on yesterday, arrested at White Bear Lake, about twelve miles from this city, three persons, charged with the theft of $40,000 in gold bearing bonds, of $1,000 each, from the well-known Lord Gordon, whose exploits in New York, and elsewhere, have given him a national reputation. The names of the parties arrested are given as Calkins, Duggett and Walker, and they have been, it appears, in the employ of Lord Gordon during his Manitoba residence. The money, with the exception of a small portion of one of the bonds, was recovered and is now in the hands of Major Brecken. The thieves were lodged in the county jail here last night but this morning were released. There is evidently something behind it, in which Gordon will play an important part.

A Scarecrow.—An old gentleman at Edinburg made a scarecrow, carried it out to his corn field, deposited it by the side of a stump, and went to work hoeing his corn. The ugly varmint gave way at the breach, slipped down and the stiff legs stretched across two corn rows. Soon the old gentleman approached, getting sight of the legs only as his hoe came down quite close to them. He dropped his hoe, raised his spectacles, took a quick glance at the trowers, and then broke for town, where he excitedly informed a Justice and several other gentlemen that he had found a dead body in his corn field. —Shenandoah Democrat.
